‘POPULATION HEALTH INTELLIGENCE’ by DoH and Microsoft is the world’s 1st true learning health system

DoH, Microsoft to develop world’s first true learning health system

The ‘Population Health Intelligence’ framework aims to create a system capable of predicting, preventing, responding to public health challenges

ABU DHABI / WAM

Department of Health – Abu Dhabi (DoH) has signed a memorandum of understanding with Microsoft to co-develop an advanced ‘Population Health Intelligence’ framework—a world’s first true learning health system.

The framework aims to create a true learning health system capable of continuously predicting, preventing, and responding to public health challenges.

The MoU was signed by Ibrahim Al Jallaf, Executive Director of Digital Health at DoH, and Naim Yazbeck, Country General Manager from Microsoft UAE.

DoH will share relevant insights and innovations from their collaboration with Microsoft in the public domain, supporting the development of similar models worldwide —WAM

“Abu Dhabi is proud to lead the charge in redefining what health systems can achieve when informed by data-led insights, and driven by purpose

Ibrahim Al Jallaf,
Executive Director of Digital Health at DoH

Around the world, fragmented data systems and reactive models are failing to meet the rising demands for treating complex chronic conditions. Therefore, Abu Dhabi is taking a bold step forward, turning billions of data points into life-changing insights driven by AI and advanced analytics into actionable interventions at the individual and population level.

The ‘Population Health Intelligence’ framework is built on two interconnected pillars: First is “Predict,” by establishing a digital twin of Abu Dhabi that consolidates clinical, behavioural, environmental and demographic data into a unified view, enabling AI to proactively detect and address health anomalies for early investigation.

Second is “Prevent and Act” by deploying AI-powered, context-aware recommendations tailored to population, district, and individual levels; simulate the future impact of interventions; and enable coordinated response based on real-time feedback.

DoH guarantees that all patient data will be handled with the utmost confidentiality and security against any unauthorised access and breaches.

Commenting on the announcement, Al Jallaf said, “Abu Dhabi is proud to lead the charge in redefining what health systems can achieve when informed by data-led insights, and driven by purpose.”

Yazbeck stated, “This collaboration reflects the transformative potential of artificial intelligence and cloud technologies in solving some of the world’s most pressing healthcare challenges. By enabling secure, real-time insights across population-level data, we are partnering with the DoH to build the digital foundations of a more predictive, personalised, and resilient healthcare system.”

DoH will share relevant insights and innovations from this collaboration in the public domain, supporting the development of similar models worldwide.

GCC delegates attend training course hosted by GPSSA

More than 30 delegates from pension and social security authorities in Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Oman, Bahrain, Qatar and the UAE are participating in the GPSSA’s training course titled Insurance Kit-Customer Happiness —WAM

ABU DHABI / WAM

The General Pension and Social Security Authority (GPSSA) is hosting a four-day training course titled Insurance Kit – Customer Happiness from April 21 to 24 at its headquarters in Abu Dhabi, aimed at enhancing knowledge, experience and collaboration among pension authorities across the GCC region.

The training is part of an initiative proposed by the GCC’s Permanent Technical Committee for Civil Retirement and Social Security Authorities and approved during the 21st meeting of the heads of civil retirement and social insurance agencies in the GCC.

Organised for members of civil retirement and social insurance bodies, the course serves as a platform to exchange expertise, share knowledge and explore best practices in insurance and social security. More than 30 delegates from pension and social security authorities in Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Oman, Bahrain, Qatar and the UAE are participating in the four-day training.

The sessions focus on enhancing both technical and administrative skills, while offering opportunities to discuss future challenges and foster professional relationships that strengthen collaboration among GCC pension institutions.

Hind Al Suwaidi, Executive Director of the Pensions Sector at the GPSSA added that citizens and customers benefit from such initiatives, which reflect the ongoing commitment of regional officials to enhancing and evolving services in the pension and social security sector:

DCT Abu Dhabi discovers 1st major Iron Age cemetery in UAE

The site in Al Ain likely includes a hundred tombs containing grave goods, and casts light on the country’s rich heritage

ABU DHABI / WAM

The Department of Culture and Tourism – Abu Dhabi (DCT Abu Dhabi) has announced the discovery of the first major Iron Age cemetery in the UAE.

The 3,000-year-old necropolis, found in Al Ain Region, was unearthed by DCT Abu Dhabi’s Archaeology Section of the Historic Environment Department. The site likely includes more than one hundred tombs containing an array of grave goods, and casts a new light on a previously unknown chapter of the UAE’s rich heritage.

Jaber Saleh Al Merri, Director of the Historic Environment Department at DCT Abu Dhabi, said, “This discovery promises to transform our understanding of the ancient Emirates. For years, the Iron Age burial traditions remained a mystery, but now we have tangible evidence that brings us closer to the people who lived here 3,000 years ago. It reinforces our efforts to preserve, promote, and protect Abu Dhabi’s heritage for future generations.” The new findings support DCT Abu Dhabi’s ongoing efforts to better understand the history and ancient communities of the Arabian Peninsula. As the single best preserved and richly documented chambered tomb necropolis from the Iron Age, the new site in Al Ain Region offers a rare glimpse into the region’s social, cultural, and economic dynamics at a key stage in its development.

All the tombs found so far were looted in antiquity. The human remains were found in a fragile condition and a team of forensic archaeologists, including an osteoarchaeologist, was present to ensure that all human remains were treated with care and respect. Laboratory analysis will reveal information regarding age, gender, and health, while the ancient DNA promises to cast light on family relationships and migration movements.

The Iron Age cemetery’s tombs in Al Ain Region were built by first digging a shaft two metres deep and then digging sideways to create an oval burial chamber —WAM

the body and grave goods were placed in the chamber, the entrance was sealed with mud-bricks or stones and the shaft was backfilled. The lack of grave markers on the surface explains why Iron Age tombs have never been found before in Al Ain Region. A few small pieces of gold jewellery that escaped looters’ attention suggest what might once have been found. Despite this, impressive burial goods include richly decorated items as part of the afterlife package, displaying high-quality craftsmanship in a range of media including pottery, carved soft-stone, and metalwork.

Drinking sets include spouted vessels, bowls, and small cups, alongside numerous copper-alloy weaponry, such as spear-heads and caches of arrowheads. These last ones often show traces of preserved wood and filaments from their shafting, and one example seems to preserve traces of the quiver that used to contain them.

Mansour bin Zayed attends first meeting of UAE-China Investment Cooperation Committee

ABU DHABI / WAM

His Highness Sheikh Mansour bin Zayed Al Nahyan, Vice President, Deputy Prime Minister and Chairman of the Presidential Court, attended the first meeting of the UAE-China Investment Cooperation Committee, which was held virtually today, in the presence of several senior officials from both countries.

Addressing the meeting, HH Sheikh Mansour conveyed the greetings of President His Highness Sheikh Mohamed bin Zayed Al Nahyan, to President of the People's Republic of China, Xi Jinping, along with his best wishes for continued prosperity and growth in bilateral relations. He also extended congratulations to the Chinese side on the occasion of the Chinese New Year.

HH Sheikh Mansour emphasised that the meeting marks a significant milestone within the strategic comprehensive relations between the UAE and China, rooted in fruitful co-operation across sectors such as economy, investment, energy, and technology.

HH Sheikh Mansour highlighted that 2024 marked a significant year as the two countries celebrated 40 years of diplomatic relations.

He indicated that bilateral trade between the UAE and China surged to $102 billion in 2024, up 7% on the previous year, reflecting the accelerating growth of their economic ties. He also praised China's continued commitment to strengthening its economic partnership with the UAE. The meeting saw the announcement of the renewal of the UAE-China Joint Investment Fund, originally launched in 2012. The fund has played a vital role in supporting impactful investment projects across several key sectors and will continue to serve as a mechanism for advancing joint strategic initiatives.

Additionally, several new agreements and memoranda of understanding were signed, covering cooperation in energy, advanced industry, digital economy, and emerging technologies.

In a moment charged with history and symbolism, Rashid Al Nuaimi, former Foreign Minister of the UAE, and the Commissioner General of the Abu Dhabi Pavilion at Expo 1970 Osaka, on Monday returned to the city to visit the UAE Pavilion at Expo 2025. Over five decades after leading the UAE's very first participation at a World Expo, Al Nuaimi's visit marks a powerful homecoming and a tribute to the country's enduring commitment to global dialogue and collaboration.

Rashid Al Nuaimi was received by Shihab Al Faheem, Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of the United Arab Emirates to Japan and Commissioner General of the UAE Pavilion at Expo 2025 Osaka.

Together, they toured the Pavilion, themed "Earth to Ether", where Al Nuaimi experienced first-hand the pavilion's immersive, multisensory journey through the UAE's story, from its cultural heritage to its pioneering innovations across space exploration, healthcare, and sustainable technology. During his visit, Al Nuaimi also greeted the pavilion's 46 youth am-

DUBAI AIRPORTS redefines accessible travel and enhances autism services and training

The expanded training programme is part of the airports’ wider strategy to ensure a supportive airport experience for guests with specific needs

Trained Dubai Airports’ Guest Experience Ambassadors, identifiable by Sunflower pins, are positioned at key touchpoints throughout DXB and DWC to provide specialised assistance and informed support to autistic guests and their families

Dubai-based carrier flydubai, Boeing sign agreement for Space Bins on 737 MAX fleet

HAMBURG / WAM

Dubai-based carrier flydubai and Boeing announced an agreement to retrofit 21 of flydubai’s 737 MAX aircraft with larger Boeing Space Bins at the Aircraft Interiors Expo (AIX).

Each Space Bin can accommodate up to six standard-sized bags per bin by turning a bag on its edge, an increase from four bags per bin compared to a standard bin. “Since commencing operations in 2009, we have remained dedicated to investing in product innovation and elevating our passengers’ inflight experience. By having Boeing’s larger Space Bins on our 737 MAX aircraft, this will provide our passengers with added convenience and increased storage space that rivals the experience offered on a wide-body aircraft,” said Daniel Kerrison, Senior Vice President of Inflight Operations at flydubai.

DUBAI / GULF TIME

Dubai Airports has expanded its autism-inclusive training programme, equipping 45,000 employees - across the wider airport community, including partners and stakeholders - to better assist autistic and sensory-sensitive travellers navigating Dubai International (DXB) and Dubai World Central – Al Maktoum International (DWC). The initiative aligns with Dubai’s broader ambition of becoming a Certified Autism Destination (CAD).

DXB is the world’s first international airport to earn the Certified Autism Centre (CAC) designation, awarded by the International Board of Credentialing and Continuing Education Standards (IBCCES) and is also Autism-Certified by the Dubai Autism Centre (DAC). The expanded training programme is part of Dubai Airports’ wider strategy to ensure a supportive airport experience for guests with specific needs.

Highlighting that genuine accessibility begins with human understanding, not just infrastructure, Majed Al Joker, Chief Operating Officer at Dubai Airports said: “True inclusion starts with people. By investing and increasing specialist training by 36% year-on-year, we are embedding a culture of understanding and proactive support across our airports.”

“DXB and DWC are more than airports — they are Dubai’s gateway to the world, shaping the first and last impressions of our city for millions of residents and visitors. With this comes a responsibility: to ensure that every guest, regardless of their individual needs, feels supported and included.”

The comprehensive, IBCCES-accredited training has been rolled out across the two airports. Frontline teams from Dubai Airports and key partners including Dubai Police, the General Directorate of Identity and Foreigners Affairs, Dubai Customs, dnata, Dubai Duty Free, Dubai Corporation for Ambulance Services, and Dubai Taxi Company, Emirates, flydubai, in addition to other airlines and concessionaires operating from DXB have integrated the training into their operations, to create a consistent, supportive environment throughout the travel experience. Employees are taught sensory awareness, effective communication, and techniques to reduce anxiety to enable them to better support and connect with neurodiverse individuals.

Trained Dubai Airports’ Guest Experience Ambassadors, identifiable by Sunflower pins, are positioned at key touchpoints throughout DXB and DWC to provide specialised assistance and informed support to autistic guests and their families.

“ True inclusion starts with people. By investing and increasing specialist training by 36% year-on-year, we are embedding a culture of understanding and proactive support across our airports

Building from Ground Up: Air Q’s Approach to Sustainable UAV Growth in UAE

*Air Q began three and a half years ago in Masdar City with a bold vision and a belief that the future of aviation could be reimagined. At the heart of that vision was CTO and co-founder Igor Pongrac, whose deep expertise in automotive engineering pushed the technical boundaries from day one. As the concept began to take shape, CEO Dino Dedic stepped in to build the business around it — bringing structure, strategy, and a clear path to scale. While Dedic doesn’t come from a traditional technical background, his ability to see the bigger picture, drive execution, and turn an idea into a company has shaped the way Air Q operates today. Together, their combined strengths laid the foundation for Air Q’s engineering culture and business vision. Excerpts from an exclusive Q&A with The GulfTime’s Arunima Mishra

ABU DHABI / GULF TIME

1. You’re a 35-year-old entrepreneur leading one of the most ambitious UAV startups in the region. What sparked your interest in aerospace and innovation, and what was your journey like before launching Air Q?
I’ve always been drawn to ambitious, high-impact industries — and aerospace is definitely one of them. While I don’t come from a traditional engineering background, I’ve spent my career building and scaling businesses in fast-moving environments.
When I was brought into Air Q, it wasn’t to invent the product — it was to build the business around a great idea and turn it into something real. That’s what drove me. The challenge wasn’t just about UAVs, it was about creating a structure, a vision, and a company that could actually deliver. That kind of pressure — where every decision counts — is where I’ve always felt at home.

2. Founding a startup in the aviation space isn’t easy. What were some of the biggest challenges you faced early on, and how did you overcome them?
With our co-founder Igor Pongrac and the fantastic team we’ve built, launching Air Q was more seamless than you might expect — but not without challenges. From the beginning, we knew we had something special: a truly unique concept that had the potential to disrupt the market and prove what we were capable of as a team.
The hardest part was doing everything for the first time — setting up the company from scratch, building the right team, adapting to a new country, and adjusting to the UAE’s heat. We came in as a small group from Europe, navigating unknowns. But we leaned on each other, moved fast, and focused on execution. That made all the difference.

3. How would you describe your leadership style, and how has that shaped the culture at Air Q?
I wouldn’t say I follow any textbook leadership style. I do things my way, which often means taking risks and trusting my instincts. For me, leadership is about stepping up when decisions need to be made and ensuring the team feels supported and motivated to give their best.
My background is primarily in startups, where speed and efficiency are everything. You don’t have layers of management or months to plan.

You build things from the ground up, and everyone’s hands-on. That mindset shaped Air Q’s culture from day one — it’s fast-paced, collaborative, and deeply personal. There’s no “that’s not my job” here. Everyone is giving their maximum. And the best reward? Seeing our product fly and watching customers get genuinely excited about it.

4. Your While you don’t come from a traditional technical background, how has your experience across different industries influenced your vision for UAV development and the direction of Air Q?
My previous journey shaped how I operate today. I’ve worked across several industries, which gave me a strong sense of business, strategy, and execution. When I stepped into the CEO role at Air Q, I didn’t know much about UAVs — but I understood how to build a business, identify opportunities, and bring the right people together.
My vision, consistency, and ability to get things moving made the team trust me in the CEO role. Every successful business relies on the same core principles: clarity, focus, hard work, and the right people. A good idea alone doesn’t mean much — you need a structure and a system to make it real. That’s what I brought to the table.

5. What sets Air Q apart in the UAV ecosystem, not just in terms of technology, mindset, and mission?
We get things done. That’s the mindset. We think, plan, and execute — and when we hit a challenge, we find a way to overcome it. Every hurdle we’ve faced has taught us something, and we’ve never stopped moving forward.

- Air Q will be the leading UAS company in the UAE — and a strong player in the region. Our strategy is to identify opportunities and deliver reliable, unique solutions
- As an R&D company, Air Q will continue pushing boundaries. As a production company, it will scale to meet demand

But beyond execution, our mission is clear: to localize and fully control every part of the UAV lifecycle. We want the UAE to have a one-stop shop for UAS — from design and development to manufacturing and deployment. That independence is vital to us, and we’re building toward it daily.

6. “HARARA”, your modular aircraft, is drawing attention. What’s the story behind the name, and how does the aircraft reflect your philosophy on design and innovation?
HARARA is our flagship—a unique VTOL aircraft that put us on the map. It brought us to Abu Dhabi, where investors saw the potential and decided to back us. The name HARARA — well, it came during one of our first flight tests. It was insanely hot, and a friend joked, “You should call it Harara,” like “heat” in Arabic. It stuck.
But more than the name, the aircraft itself reflects what we’re about—bold, modular design, full in-house development, and solving complex technical challenges with simplicity and elegance. We identified what was missing in the market and built it ourselves—a CAN gateway, power systems, and even our manufacturing. That’s how we innovate.

7. Abu Dhabi has become a hub for startups and smart mobility. How has this ecosystem supported Air Q’s growth, and what advice would you give to other founders looking to launch here?
I’ve lived in several countries, and I can say with full confidence that the UAE is the future, especially Abu Dhabi. The leadership here is visionary. They see things differently and build long-term, trust-based relationships. That trust fuels innovation. We brought over 50 people from abroad to join us here — and they didn’t just find jobs, they found a home. The lifestyle, ecosystem, and opportunities are on another level.
To other founders: give it a real chance. Don’t be quick to judge or think on the surface. Dig deeper — the opportunity here is massive if you’re ready to commit.

8. Air Q recently partnered with Tawazun Quality and Conformity. What does this mean for your roadmap toward aerospace certification and global expansion?
This partnership is a huge step forward. It gives us the framework and credibility for full certification and global compliance. More importantly, it shows that local institutions believe in our vision. With Tawazun’s support, we can accelerate our development and take our products to markets we’ve only dreamed of. It’s also a validation of our work — and a signal that we’re ready for the next level.

9. How do you balance innovation with regulation, especially as UAV policies evolve?
Regulation is not a blocker — it’s a structure. From day one, we knew we had to obey the rules, especially in aviation. So, we’ve built a strong internal compliance process and work closely with regulators, not against them. At the same time, we keep pushing innovation — but always with safety, reliability, and long-term vision. It’s about building trust with the ecosystem while still moving fast.

10. Where do you envision Air Q five years from now? And where do you see yourself in the next phase of your career?
Air Q will be the leading UAS company in the UAE — and a strong player in the region. Our strategy is to identify opportunities and deliver reliable, unique solutions. As an R&D company, we’ll continue pushing boundaries. As a production company, we’ll scale to meet demand.
We already produce most components in-house; if we don’t, we try to source locally to strengthen the UAE economy. Our goal is complete localization, and we’re moving fast in that direction.
So expect some big news soon — we’re just getting started.
