He explained that extremism and radicalisation are society's most significant challenges. The problem does not lie in religions and their teachings, but rather in those who attempt to reinterpret tolerant religious values based on extremist visions and ideologies that are far removed from the true and lofty purposes of religion.

On the sidelines of the conference, TRENDS participated in the accompanying exhibition, presenting a selection of its most prominent research and knowledge publications. Its research team also held discussions with prominent figures and thinkers on strengthening research co-operation and partnerships to support global intellectual dialogue.
