Dr. Sultan Ahmed Al Jaber, Minister of Industry and Advanced Technology and Masdar's founding CEO

"Driven by His Highness' long-term vision and unwavering commitment, Masdar didn't ride the clean energy wave. We helped create it," he added.

Mohamed Jameel Al Ramahi, Chief Executive Officer of Masdar, said that Masdar's rise over the past 20 years has been driven by the UAE's ambition and foresight, anticipating the rise in clean power demand and looking to diversify its economy early. "Through partnership, innovation, and investment we have grown into a global business, driving the development and deployment of clean energy solutions worldwide. Today, with global electricity demand growing at pace, Masdar stands at the centre of a thriving international industry, delivering affordable, secure power to our partners around the world."

Masdar's journey began with a single grid-connected solar plant in Masdar City in 2009. It has since delivered some of the most ambitious renewable energy projects ever built, including the 2GW Al Dhafra solar plant, the world's largest single-site solar facility upon its 2023 completion, powering around 200,000 UAE homes.

From a handful of employees in 2006, Masdar now employs over 1,100 people across 12 countries. Its portfolio spans continents and technologies: the world's first floating offshore wind farm (30MW, Hywind Scotland), Southeast Asia's largest floating solar project (145MW Cirata, Indonesia), and Central Asia's largest wind farm (500MW Zarafshan, Uzbekistan).

In 2022, Masdar entered its new ownership structure with Abu Dhabi National Energy Company (TAQA), Mubadala and Abu Dhabi National Oil Company (ADNOC) becoming joint shareholders, committed to accelerating Masdar's growth.

Recent acquisitions — Saeta Yield in Spain, a 50 percent stake in Terra-Gen in the United States, and TERNA ENERGY in Greece — have further cemented Masdar's position as a truly global clean energy powerhouse.
