DUBAI / WAM

The study titled 'Orchestrating AI at scale for sovereignty and resilience' highlights the UAE's strong global positioning in adopting AI orchestration platforms, where it outpaces global peers. Around 20% of organisations in the country are currently implementing AI governance platforms, compared to 12% globally, the data reveals.

Based on insights from more than 1,000 senior executives across 20 countries and 23 sectors, the study explores how organisations are evolving their approaches to AI governance to enhance performance, improve adaptability, and strengthen operational resilience amid accelerating global change. they struggle to manage the complexity resulting from too many AI assets, compared to 52% globally.

Findings indicate that organisations adopting structured AI governance frameworks are better positioned to scale AI deployment effectively, generate stronger business outcomes, and achieve higher returns on investment. However, only 13% of organisations in the UAE currently apply comprehensive AI governance frameworks across all initiatives, highlighting a key opportunity for further development.

Khalfan Juma Belhou, CEO of the Dubai Future Foundation, said, "This report underscores the importance of empowering both the public and private sectors to adopt advanced AI applications and expand their use in line with best governance practices. This aligns with our ongoing efforts to deliver the objectives of the 'Dubai Universal Blueprint for Artificial Intelligence', launched by H.H. Sheikh Hamdan bin Mohammed bin Rashid Al Maktoum, Crown Prince of Dubai, Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Defence, and Chairman of the Board of Trustees of Dubai Future Foundation, and implemented by the Dubai Centre for Artificial Intelligence in collaboration with government entities and leading local and global technology companies, to further strengthen Dubai's leadership in this critical future-focused sector."

He added, "The UAE's early efforts to advance AI across sectors reflect its national vision to build a resilient, future-ready digital economy. In a rapidly evolving global and regional landscape, the ability to scale AI confidently while maintaining stability and continuity will be key to sustaining growth and reinforcing the UAE's position as a global leader in advanced technologies."

Emirates, Real Madrid extend legacy partnership to 2031

DUBAI / WAM

Emirates and Real Madrid CF have renewed their partnership, extending one of the highest profile sponsorships in football through to 2031, and cementing a relationship that will span close to two decades.

Emirates has been a proud partner of Real Madrid since 2011, with the relationship deepening further in 2013 when the airline became the club's official jersey sponsor. As part of the renewed partnership, Emirates will continue as Official Main Sponsor and Official Airline Partner of both the men's and women's teams, with its iconic branding on player jerseys, training kits, and team staff apparel across all major competitions, including La Liga, the UEFA Champions League, Copa del Rey, and the Spanish Super Cup. The renewal also marks a major milestone for both brands — becoming the longest-running jersey sponsorship in La Liga history.

Beyond match kits, the renewed agreement includes extensive Emirates brand visibility throughout Santiago Bernabéu Stadium, access to the club's training facilities, and the Emirates Lounge, an exclusive in-stadium hospitality space that brings the airline's signature experience to its loyal customers and trade partners. The partnership also extends to Real Madrid's youth teams, supporting the development of the next generation of talent at the grassroots level, and underlining the airline's commitment to the future of the game.

The sponsorship also strengthens the airline's presence in basketball, covering a newly signed multi-year agreement making Emirates Official Main Sponsor of Real Madrid's basketball club through 2031.

Boutros Boutros, Executive Vice President of Corporate Communications, Marketing and Brand, said, "Emirates has a long history of championing football, connecting with millions of people and bringing communities together through our shared love of the game. What we have built with Real Madrid is a shining example of that commitment, putting fans at the heart of the game, giving them access to moments they will never forget, and inspiring the next generation of fans and players."

"As our relationship with Real Madrid grew, so did our presence in Spain. Since our first flight to Madrid in 2010, we've expanded our footprint in the country with five daily flights across Barcelona and Madrid, added new cities to our global network with reliable and convenient connectivity via Dubai, and enhanced the travel experience by bringing the latest and greatest Emirates onboard products to Spanish skies, a signal of our long-term commitment to the market."

For his part, Florentino Pérez, President of Real Madrid, highlighted the significance of the agreement: "Our partnership reflects the strong and unique relationship we have built over the years. We have stood side by side throughout one of the most successful periods in our club's history, and we remain committed to continuing this journey together."

Emirates ready to invest in daily flights to Berlin and Stuttgart

BERLIN / WAM

Emirates confirmed it stands ready to launch daily services to Berlin and Stuttgart, committing more than 100 million EUR each year in operational expenses, staff, airport charges, fuel and other expenditures, subject to the approval of the German Federal Ministry of Transport.

Berlin sits as the political heart of Europe's largest economy. A city of 3.9 million people, it is home to a thriving start-up ecosystem, a well-established diplomatic community, and a cultural scene that draws millions of visitors each year. Yet its long-haul connectivity has not kept pace with the city's strong global credentials. In fact, according to OAG schedule data, over 85% of Berlin Brandenburg Airport's international connectivity is concentrated within Europe. Stuttgart faces a comparable gap in long-haul services. The economic engine of Baden-Württemberg, one of Germany's most export-driven states, remains underserved when it comes to long-haul air connectivity, the very kind of connectivity manufacturers, suppliers, and trading partners depend upon.

Sir Tim Clark, President of Emirates Airline, said, "Emirates is ready to bring daily widebody connectivity to Berlin and Stuttgart and connect them with our extensive network, backed by substantial investment. These are two of Germany's most important economic centres, yet both remain underserved when it comes to long-haul connectivity. German businesses have told us they need it, the Berlin Chamber of Commerce has called for it, our own data confirms the demand is there, and flights are forecast to be full. Emirates already connects Germany to 50 destinations across Africa, the Middle East, Southeast Asia, and Australasia that no German airline serves. These are destinations that matter to German exporters, tourism operators, and the millions of travellers looking for more choice and better connections. All we are asking for is the opportunity to serve these cities and their communities, and we remain committed to working constructively with the German authorities to make that a reality and deliver tangible benefits that would be felt across both city regions from day one of our operations."

New Emirates routes to both cities would generate hundreds of new jobs. A 2012 study by the German Aerospace Centre (DLR) estimated that a daily Emirates service to both Berlin and Stuttgart would create close to 1,000 direct and indirect jobs.

bringing fans closer to the action. The airline has emblazoned its support for the team on several A380 aircraft over the years with bespoke decals starring first-team players, as well as full aircraft liveries on the dedicated Boeing 777 for chartered services from Madrid to Jeddah for the Spanish Super Cup tournament. The two iconic brands have also collaborated on money-can't-buy fan experiences such as meet and greets, match day activations and competitions to bring the most passionate fans to the games.

ABU DHABI / WAM

Etihad Airways is to double its flights between Abu Dhabi and Kabul from 15th July 2026, with the route's rapid growth since launch prompting the airline to add a second daily service in each direction.

Kabul joined the Etihad network in March 2026, initially operating four times weekly. Demand has significantly exceeded expectations, with strong take-up from both point-to-point travellers and those using Abu Dhabi's Zayed International Airport as a hub to connect onwards to Europe and beyond.

Arik De, Etihad's Chief Revenue and Commercial Officer, said: "The response to our Kabul launch has been exceptional. Demand has remained strong from day one, and mov-

"This rapid expansion is another example of the strategic approach we take to network development, allowing us to respond quickly to the wishes of our guests, and strengthening Abu Dhabi's role as an important gateway connecting regional markets with our global network."
