XRG backs Argentina’s ambition to become a global LNG leader

The project supports XRG’s ambition to become a top-five global gas player and establishes Latin America as a new growth region within its portfolio

PARIS / WAM

Dr. Sultan Ahmed Al Jaber, Executive Chairman of XRG, said that XRG is backing Argentina’s ambition to become a major new supplier of LNG to global markets.

Speaking at Argentina Week in Paris, Dr. Al Jaber said XRG’s participation in Argentina LNG reflects confidence in the scale and quality of Vaca Muerta, the country’s improving investment environment and the combined ability of YPF, Eni and XRG to deliver a globally competitive LNG project.

“Argentina has the ingredients to build a world-class LNG business. Vaca Muerta is the world’s second largest shale

In June 2026, XRG and Eni each agreed to acquire a 32% interest in three YPF-operated Vaca Muerta blocks: Meseta Buena Esperanza, Aguada Villanueva and Las Tacanas —WAM gas resource and the fourth largest for shale oil. Oil production is at record levels, and last year Argentina posted its largest energy trade surplus in more than three decades. That is not a forecast; it is a track record. It gives XRG confidence that the resource is real, the capability is proven and Argentina can deliver at scale.”

During Argentina Week, hosted by the Government of Argentina, Dr. Al Jaber met President Javier Milei and joined a panel with Horacio Marín, Chairman and CEO of YPF, and Claudio Descalzi, CEO of Eni. He noted that investments of this scale span decades and require confidence, predictability and a shared commitment to delivery. “The reforms led by President Milei, including the new RIGI investment framework, are creating the long-term stability that capital-intensive energy projects need and strengthening Argentina’s appeal to international investors.”

Dr. Al Jaber explained how success is not measured only in the LNG that leaves Argentina.
