Abu Dhabi clean energy generation up 1,000% since 2020: EWEC

ABU DHABI / WAM

Emirates Water and Electricity Company (EWEC) on Thursday announced that renewable and clean energy generation across Abu Dhabi, powered by nuclear, solar, and wind, has increased by over 1,000 per cent between 2020 and 2025, reflecting the success of the Emirate's energy transition.

This progress reflects EWEC's long-term capacity planning and the integration of renewable and clean energy technologies into Abu Dhabi's power system.

The four units of the Barakah Nuclear Energy Plant, the first nuclear energy plant in the Arab world, were brought online progressively between 2020 and 2024, establishing a continuous source of emissions-free baseload power.

Over the same period, transformative projects commissioned and developed by EWEC's significantly expanded renewable generation, including Al Dhafra Solar PV and Noor Abu Dhabi, two of the world's largest single-site solar power generation plants.

EWEC's latest consolidated operational data shows that renewable and clean electricity generation sources now account for almost 46 per cent of Abu Dhabi's total power generation, up from under 5 per cent in 2020.

Between 2020 and 2025, renewable and clean energy generation increased from approximately 4,100 gigawatt hours (GWh) to more than 49,300GWh.

Mohamed Almarzooqi, Chief Assets Officer of EWEC, said: "The scale of progress achieved over the past five years demonstrates the impact of EWEC's long-term planning and the disciplined integration of a diversified renewable and clean energy portfolio."

The company's priority was to translate its strategy into growth and operational performance to meet rising energy demand responsible

ABU DHABI / WAM

Mubadala Energy aims to double its production over the next decade, with natural gas accounting for about 70 percent of its portfolio, Acting Chief Executive Officer Adnan Bu Fateem said.

In statements to the Emirates News Agency (WAM) on the sidelines of ADIPEC 2026, Bu Fateem said the company's priority was to translate its strategy into disciplined growth and reliable operational performance to meet rising energy demand responsibly and deliver sustainable value to its shareholders and the countries in which it operates.

In Malaysia, the company operates the Pegaga gas field, where it recently expanded production capacity and is exploring further growth opportunities. In Indonesia, it is advancing the Tangkulo development, building on its established exploration presence in the Andaman Sea.

In the United States, Mubadala Energy's investment in Caturus LLC provides an integrated presence spanning gas production in the Haynesville Basin and the Commonwealth liquefied natural gas (LNG) project, which reached a Final Investment Decision in May 2026. The project has a planned production capacity of 9.5 million tonnes annually, with recently announced plans to increase capacity to 16 million tonnes per year.

The company is entering a phase focused on converting recent discoveries and investments into producing projects that can provide reliable long-term energy supplies: Bu Fateem —WAM

> Across its exploration and production portfolio, Mubadala Energy is seeking to improve operational reliability, reduce downtime and emissions, and use predictive maintenance technologies and real-time data to support decision-making

The company has also strengthened its position in Egypt by completing the acquisition of a 15 percent stake in the Nargis Offshore Area, complementing its existing investments in the Zohr and Nour concessions.

Bu Fateem said these investments reflected the company's strategy of pursuing growth through strong partnerships and clear routes to market, while building a more integrated and resilient portfolio.

Mubadala Energy currently operates in 10 countries, with seven producing assets across Southeast Asia, the Middle East, the Eastern Mediterranean and the United States.

He said this geographical diversification allowed the company to balance producing assets, development projects and exploration opportunities.

ADIPEC 2026 maps path from AI to industrial-scale deployment

Discussions throughout the day highlighted the importance of collaboration between energy and technology sectors

ABU DHABI / WAM

Artificial intelligence (AI), digital infrastructure and energy resilience took centre stage on the third day of ADIPEC 2026.

Leaders from across the energy, technology and investment sectors examined how AI can be deployed at scale to improve productivity, strengthen operational performance and support more secure energy systems.

Discussions throughout the day reflected a broader industry shift from experimentation to implementation. While companies are increasingly confident in AI's capabilities, speakers emphasised that realising its full value will depend on the data, infrastructure, governance frameworks and investment needed to embed the technology across complex industrial operations.

> Discussions throughout ADIPEC 2026 reflected a broader industry shift from experimentation to implementation

Within the Strategic Conference, the AI, Digital & Technology Innovation programme examined what it takes to build an AI-ready energy system.

Speaking in the session titled 'Beyond digital: how AI is reshaping industries, economies and society', Helmut von Struve, CEO of Siemens UAE & Middle East, said, "The greatest value from an AI perspective is where industries, and also the essential services we depend on, can be improved. It is really about how we can make essential operations more productive and reliable, and how we can make them more resource-efficient."

Several companies used ADIPEC as a platform to unveil new technologies —WAM

Discussions throughout the day also highlighted the importance of collaboration between the energy and technology sectors. In the session 'Beyond collaboration: redefining energy partnerships for cross-sector collaboration', John Gilley, CEO of Kent, and Dr. Ahmed Mohamed Alebri, CEO of ADNOC Onshore, explored how transparency, digital technologies and data-sharing are enabling deeper industrial partnerships.

Discussing the growing convergence between digital infrastructure and energy systems, Gilley said, "We are seeing that it is not just about energy; it is about connecting the world's appetite for data with the world's appetite for energy. Each country wants to have control of its own data and energy."

In the session titled 'Digital transformation: building an AI-ready energy system', Rakesh Jaggi, President Digital, SLB, Som Dutta, Group VP – AI and Data Science, DP World, and Ashish Koshy, CEO, Inception42, discussed the data foundations, digital infrastructure and operating models that companies need before AI can be embedded across operations at scale.

ABU DHABI / AD MEDIA OFFICE

The Zayed Charity Run Organising Committee has announced the second edition of the Run for the Nation, Hassantak Ya Watan, taking place on 29 November 2026 in Abu Dhabi, with more than 20,000 UAE Nationals and residents expected to participate. Coinciding with the UAE's National Day celebrations, the sporting and community event aims to promote physical activity while reinforcing the values of unity and belonging.

Run for the Nation builds on the legacy of the Zayed Charity Run, which was launched in 2001 to honour the legacy of the late Sheikh Zayed bin Sultan Al Nahyan, Founding Father of the UAE, and his humanitarian vision rooted in giving and community service. The run uses sport as a means of encouraging community participation and promoting healthy lifestyles.

Lieutenant General (Ret.) Mohamed Helal Al Kaabi, Chairman of the Organising Committee of the Zayed Charity Run, affirmed that Run for the Nation embodies the humanitarian and national message carried by the Zayed Charity Run since its launch. He noted that sport in the UAE has become a platform that brings together different segments of society and strengthens the spirit of cooperation and belonging.

> "We see Run for the Nation as much more than a sporting event; it is a national occasion that reflects the spirit of the UAE and its deeply rooted values. The name of the run carries a profound message: a nation is safeguarded through the cohesion of its community, the health of its people and their positive participation in initiatives that bring them together around a shared purpose Al Kaabi said: "We see Run for the Nation as much more than a sporting event; it is a national occasion that reflects the spirit of the UAE and its deeply rooted values. The name of the run carries a profound message: a nation is safeguarded through the cohesion of its community, the health of its people and their positive participation in initiatives that bring them together around a shared purpose.

"We look forward to establishing the run as an annual event that leaves a lasting impact beyond the day itself and encourages people to adopt healthier and more active lifestyles. True success is not measured solely by the number of participants or sporting results, but by the positive impact we create in the lives of individuals and the community."

His Excellency Aref Hamad Al Awani, Secretary General of the Abu Dhabi Sports Council, affirmed that Run for the Nation builds on the legacy of the Zayed Charity Run and embodies the enduring values of generosity, community cohesion and national belonging instilled by the late Sheikh Zayed bin Sultan Al Nahyan, Founding Father of the UAE.

His Excellency Al Awani said: "This national and humanitarian initiative highlights the role of sport in strengthening community ties and encouraging healthy lifestyles. We look forward to broad participation from citizens and residents as the UAE celebrates Eid Al Etihad, reflecting our shared pride in the nation and its enduring values."

The run will commence at Wahat Al Karama and conclude at ERTH Abu Dhabi, bringing together participants of all ages and backgrounds for a shared experience that reflects the spirit of community and belonging at the heart of the event.

The Run for the Nation will feature three distances of 3km, 5km and 10km, providing opportunities for participants of different ages and fitness levels to take part. From families enjoying the experience together to recreational runners and experienced athletes, the event is designed to encourage widespread participation. Registration will be free of charge, making the run accessible to the wider community, while awards across age-group categories will recognise sporting achievement.

The experience will extend beyond the finish line at ERTH Abu Dhabi, where a vibrant community village will bring participants, families and visitors together for a celebration featuring entertainment, interactive activities and family-friendly experiences. The village will serve as a lively gathering place, adding to the excitement of the day and creating an engaging atmosphere for everyone to enjoy.

Run for the Nation is organised by ERTH Abu Dhabi, Etizan Fitness and Abu Dhabi Sports Council, in partnership with L'IMAD, Mubadala, EDGE, Cyber Security Council, Al Ain Water, Al Masaood, Burjeel Medical City, Tadweer Group, reflecting their shared commitment to supporting sporting and community initiatives, promoting healthy and active lifestyles, and encouraging wider participation in events that bring together people from all walks of life.

As preparations continue for 29 November, the Zayed Charity Run Organising Committee invites citizens and residents across the UAE to register and be part of the Run for the Nation, an occasion dedicated to celebrating community, creating lasting memories and bringing people together through the shared joy of sport.

Sheikh Zayed Grand Mosque Centre organises 'Astrolabe' workshop, extending Light & Peace Museum experience

The workshop is part of a series of initiatives that the Centre continues to organise in line with museum's objectives

ABU DHABI / WAM

To enhance the experience of the Light & Peace Museum, which extends Sheikh Zayed Grand Mosque Centre's mission of introducing audiences to the depth of Islamic civilisation, the Centre organised a cultural workshop titled 'Astrolabe' for more than 20 female students from Al Zalaqa School in the Emirate of Abu Dhabi. The workshop is part of a series of initiatives and workshops that the Centre continues to organise in line with the museum's objectives. The museum combines design, storytelling and rare artistic treasures to offer an inspiring and richly layered narrative experience, complemented by a curated selection of artefacts and exhibits from different periods of Islamic history, including an astrolabe dating to the 17th century.

The workshop aimed to pass this scientific heritage on to younger generations by introducing the students to the astrolabe as one of the most important astronomical instruments known and developed in Islamic civilisation. It featured a presentation covering what the instrument is and the Greek origin of its name, which literally means 'star-taker' or 'star-measurer', along with its history, significance, main parts and uses.

The workshop highlighted the pivotal role the astrolabe has played throughout history in observing celestial bodies before the invention of the telescope, helping sailors navigate and determine direction, and bringing astronomy closer to learners. It also addressed the qualitative leap the instrument made in the Islamic era, when it was specially developed to determine the five daily prayer times accurately and to find the direction of the Qibla from any location in the world. The students also learned about its main parts: the ring, the mater and limb, the rete (or 'spider'), the plate and the alidade.

The workshop included a tour of the Light & Peace Museum, which offers a comprehensive overview of Islamic civilisation and its intellectual and artistic achievements across the ages, through rare artefacts and interactive experiences that draw on the latest technologies. Amid display cases that have safeguarded the astrolabe for centuries, and in a small drawing session in which the students sketched its paper version by hand for the first time, the distance between past and present felt closer than it usually does. Having made their own paper astrolabes in this artistic activity, the students concluded their visit with the interactive 360-degree Diya – A Universe of Light experience, which uses sound and light to convey the Mosque's civilisational message in an innovative way.
